

TINLEY HOMECOMING STARTS TONITE

Lincoln, 30, Sentenced To 1 to 14 Years

James F. Lincoln, 30, son of wealthy industrialist, was sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the Illinois state penitentiary Tuesday by Judge C. D. Henry of Kankakee in the Will County circuit court.

He is charged with hitting Carol Williams, 9 years old girl, residing on Maple Road near Joliet, with a hammer on the head and then shooting her four times with a rifle when she resisted his advances on March 20.

Melville A. Gray of Joliet and Attorney Heth of Chicago represented the defense and Attorney John H. Savage of Joliet represented the Williams family. Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Carol were in court.

His attorney, who withdrew the not guilty plea, to guilty, explained: "Lincoln is mentally ill, but not to the extent to justify his commitment to an asylum for the insane. His condition would be aggravated thru daily contact with persons wholly deranged. Medical science has evolved and developed effective methods of treating sequelae to brain injuries.

"Doctors assure us Lincoln's condition is such as will yield to the type of treatment as available at Stateville. It has been the prime consideration of the family to pursue a course which will guarantee a cure of the young man and safely restore him to society."

More pallid than during any of his previous court appearances, Lincoln's face displayed no emotions when the sentence was passed. He leaned against the lawyers stand and moved his hands nervously from his pockets to the edge of the stand. He was apparently in good spirits. His wife Laura and his father who were seated directly behind the lawyers table, showed little emotion as the sentence was passed. When he left the courtroom, he kissed both his wife and her sister who was also present. Lincoln expressed satisfaction with the sentence, saying: "I'm told that I need the type of treatment I can get at Stateville. And if that's what I need to get better, that's the best place for me."

Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Carol were seated inconspicuously at one side and were calm throughout the proceedings.

Under the statutes, Lincoln will be eligible to appear before the pardon board of the state after serving 11 months at Stateville. However, it was pointed out that even with time off for good behavior, he could be incarcerated at Stateville for 8 years and 9 months under the indeterminate sentence of 1 to 14 years.

The other two charges on which Lincoln Jr., was indicted by the March term grand jury were nolle prossed by Judge Henry on the motion of State's Attorney Burke. One of the indictments charged Lincoln with assault with intent to rape Carol and the other charged him with assault with intent to rape 11-year-old Darlene Wood of New Lenox on March 19.

The $57,000 civil suit filed against young Lincoln by the Williams family for damages suffered by the girl and by them as a result of the attack, is still pending. Attorney Gray said that from present indications, the case will go to trial, but probably not until the September term of the court.

NO INDIANS . . . But here is where some 25,000 Indian clay pipes can be made every day. The factory is at Pamplin City, Va.

In These United States

Indian Stone Pipes Are Big Industry in Virginia Town

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK
WNU Features.

Pamplin City, Virginia, town of 300, has the world's largest plant making Indian stone clay pipes. The factory has a capacity of 25,000 "smokers" per day, using a kiln that will handle 200,000 at a single burning. It uses four regular employees and as many as 70 on a part-time basis.

Most prized product of the plant is patterned after the "Powhatan" Indian pipe. This is held to have been invented by Virginia Indians many generations ago, in the Virginia county whose name it bears. It had a long stem, gracefully curved at the upper end, so that the smoker once seated in his easy chair could pull away knowing that "all the nicotine would be gone after the long journey through it and the smoke well cooled." Clay for the pipe was soft and soapy — somewhat like meerschaum—believed to have been found in some cave where water had deposited an unusual sediment without grit.

Clay in the Pamplin City area meets requirements for the original "Powhatan" as well as other pipes including "Ole Virginny," "Pow-wow" and "Wigwam." It has served this purpose adequately for more than 200 years, according to authentic records, having "gone through" the present plant for almost 50 years.

Pamplin City has a sense of security so long as the buying trend is toward Indian stone and clay pipes. In addition to this unique factory which draws many workers from nearby farms and villages, it has 20 business establishments and a lumber mill. Tourists and visitors from everywhere frequent it for pipes for personal use, gifts or souvenirs since every American smoker appreciates a genuine Indian pipe.

CATHEDRAL ROOM . . . Lewis and Clark cavern in Montana, third greatest in the United States, is open this year to tourists on a large scale for the first time. It was discovered early in this century by a prospector, Dan Morrison, who saw an eagle fly into "a hole in the hill."

Arkansas Grows Some Whoppers

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. — California and Florida people who boast about productivity will now hear from Arkansas. Recent newspaper clippings call attention to these Arkansas "whoppers":

A stalk of cotton with 85 bolls; a 91 pound pumpkin; a 5 1/2 pound sweet potato; a 19 ounce apple measuring 14 inches in circumference, and two bass weighing more than 5 pounds caught at the same time on one hook.

He's Caught Up

MOBILE, ALA. — Born in 1943, Ronald Regan was only 11 inches long and weighed 2 pounds and 11 ounces. Battling for two and a half years, he has caught up with normal growth and weighs over 25 pounds.

Why Allegany Never Became Great City

ALLEGANY, N. Y. — Allegany (1940 pop., 1,436) was planned as Allegany City, "the intellectual, cultural, industrial and mercantile hub of the East." But through freak accidents its dream was never realized.

The proposed city had been completed and surveyed on paper and the company started to build a palatial hotel (the Park hotel recently dismantled) according to plans. Work was interrupted on the Erie

Prefab Houses Built in 1850

HAMILTON, MO. — Prefabricated houses are nearly 100 years old in Missouri, for this town of 1,600 population built them back in the 1850s.

There were no carpenters in Hamilton, so A. G. Davis sent plans for a two-story house to a St. Louis firm. He received the lumber, windows and doors with holes already bored for wooden pegs — since there were no nails available. Complete instructions for assembling the house were furnished. A few years later, Otis Richardson did likewise.

The Richardson house is still in good shape. It has been remodeled and is in use.

Half of Topsoil Has Washed Away

BECKLEY, W. VA. — More than 50 per cent of the original top soil on West Virginia land has been washed away, according to Walter C. Grumbel, a soil conservationist.

"Where soil conservation methods have been practiced," Grumbel said, "crop yields have increased anywhere from 10 to 25 per cent."

He said an intelligent conservation program would protect and stabilize the land and water supply, restore plant food, increase farm income, prevent floods and restore forests and wild life.

Man Really Builds 'Better Mouse Trap'

BAMBERG, S. C. — S. D. Bishop has finally built that "better" mousetrap and may have a path beaten to his door. But it was entirely accidental.

What Bishop was really making was a fish trap. He left it overnight at the feed store where he is employed, baited and ready for a try-out.

Next morning he found five rats he caught 19 more.

Ex-GI Gives Anti-Snorer To the Army

BEAVERTON, ORE. — T. M. Weed, local lawyer, who used to be a G.I. and knows what snoring sounds like in a barracks, has submitted his "no-snore kit" to the U. S. quartermaster corps.

He claims snoring can be stopped or greatly reduced by a specially constructed device designed to prevent the fluttering action of the soft palate and uvula that causes the coarse, low-pitched irritating noise made by a sleeping person.

Weed admits that it was the complaints of his barracks mates in 1942 and 1943 that spurred him to devise an anti-snore device. He used it for the other two years he was in the army—and made friends!

More Crop Dusting
Peanuts may be dusted from airplanes in the near future. Tests carried on at the Omega plant farms at Omega, Ga., first of the kind in that section, proved that plant dusting from the air not only costs about one-half as much as dusting or spraying from tractors but is much more efficient, since a single plane can dust 1,000 acres per day.

DOES a winning horse make a star trainer, or does the trainer make the winning horse? Does a winning baseball team make the leading manager, or does the manager make the winning baseball team? Does a winning football team make the winning coach, or does the coach make the winning football team?

Connie Mack

This ancient argument keeps popping up from time to time, but the answer is as simple as adding two and three. The material nearly always is about 80 per cent of it—often more than that. As a result coaches, trainers and managers are given far too much credit for winning results, and have to shoulder far too much blame for failures they couldn't help. They have important work to handle and their superior skill is needed at times to beat an opponent just a bit better—but they can't close the gap between class and mediocrity.

In something more than 40 seasons Connie Mack has won nine pennants. He also has had as many or more fail enders. Frank Chance won four pennants in five years with the old Cubs, but Chance couldn't get the Yankees, or Highlanders as they were known then, within V-rocket range of the first division.

The same thing applies to football coaches who are bedecked with laurel and olive when they have a big, hard-charging line and fast-moving backs but who are panned to a pulp when they can't win with a poor line and slow-moving ball carriers. Football coaches, realizing this, with the help of willing alumni have outclassed all other fields in locating promising talent and bringing the same to the campus they must guard—especially when they have enough money with which to work and the scholastic requirements are softened up. No one can blame the coaches for this action, the same being for self-protection.

As far as material vs. management goes, what manager could lift the Athletics or the Phillies out of last place? In your summary you can include Stalin, Truman and John L. Lewis. The winning answer is the material.

Best College Outfit

In the midst of the tumult and the shouting from baseball, racing, boxing and golf, there is a clear note from college sports that sings its own song. This note comes from Oklahoma A. & M. to this effect:

Dear Mr. Rice: Please allow me to introduce myself. My name is Weldon B. Boyles of Oklahoma City. I am attending Oklahoma A. & M. for the first time under the G.I. Bill.

When I first enrolled, in January of this year, I realized that Oklahoma A. & M. was turning out a basketball team of national importance and, in view of the fact that A. & M. had a national ranking football team last fall, I began to wonder if the Aggies were not setting a new American mark in that: (1) No school, two years in a row, ever ranked so high in both of our major sports (basketball, football); (2) No school has ever accomplished the feat of winning THREE top sports in ONE school year.

Here is part of what the Aggies have done so far:

In FOOTBALL, the Aggies ranked 11th in 1944, plus a Cotton Bowl win. In BASKETBALL, the Ags placed 1st in 1944, beating DePaul.

But look what they've done this school year of 1945-1946:

1. FOOTBALL—They ranked 2nd (tied with Alabama) and won the Sugar Bowl game.

2. BASKETBALL — They ranked 1st. Kentucky did not meet them because I don't think Adolph Rupp cared to take the chance.

3. Wrestling—they won 1st place in the NCAA tournament, beating Iowa Teachers.

Is it possible, when you compare the Aggies against some of the other schools, that you might print some of the findings in your daily column? There probably are many sports lovers in our land who would enjoy the reading of such information, although you would be laying yourself wide open to a blast of controversy from many loyal alumni of other schools.

Weldon B. Boyles. We have no set of vital statistics at hand to clear up this point, but for the moment we can't recall another college outfit with a better all-around record against the competition of present years.

Career of Jake Jones

The new White Sox first baseman, Jake Jones, stands 6 feet 3 inches and comes from Monroe, La. He left college to play in the Texas league and in 1941 was called to the White Sox—but the arrival of war ended Jones' career as a ballplayer when he enlisted in naval aviation. Here is what one of the flying mates says:

"A great guy and one of the best fliers I ever saw," he said. "Jake was on the Fighting Lady, one of the fightingest carriers in the war.

Production of Hens Can Be Controlled

All Factors Must Be Operated Efficiently

The hen has long shared honors with the cow as being the world's most efficient machine. This model of the mechanics of the hen will give some idea of the egg factory.

When eggs are laid on consecutive days, the yolk of one egg is discharged from the ovary about 30 minutes after the laying of the previous eggs.

Hens must be bred with the internal capacity to produce eggs if they are to be profitable. But the best bred hen in the world will not be profitable unless well housed, well fed and well treated. No other farm animal will respond as rapidly to proper—or improper—management. In order that eggs complete the cycle every 24 hours, all working parts of the hen must be properly functioning. This takes a well-balanced ration along with ideal conditions.

Protect Farm Trees

There are several methods that have proven satisfactory in protecting young trees against rabbits and other animals. Tar paper may be wrapped around the tree, or chicken wire may be stretched to circle the tree.

An effective guard may be made from discarded garden hose, which may then be wrapped around the young trees. This guard may be used year after year, requires no fastening as the hose will always retain its cylindrical shape.

The use of paper is not generally recommended as it will not last long and some animals will find little difficulty in chewing through the tar paper.

Improved Safer Hitch For Power Machines

If a farmer purchases a new tractor or standardizes the power take-off of his old tractor with conversion packages, furnished by all manufacturers of farm implements, greater convenience, economy and safety will result. These A.S.A.E. hook-ups are available at all dealers for any make of tractor.

Rabbits Prove Big

Forage Consumers

Young jack rabbits consume some dry feed as early as five days after birth, according to Arizona station studies. Following weaning, at three weeks of age a rabbit consumes an average daily ration equal to 2 to 4 per cent of its body weight. From 5 to 14 weeks of age, the food consumption averages 6 per cent of the light weight of the animal.

They reach their maximum food consumption between 14 and 26 weeks of age. On this basis, it would not take many rabbits to clean up an acre of growing crops.

Harvesting Asparagus By Improved Method

In the past asparagus spears were cut by using specially designed knives. The spear was cut from 1/2 to 1 1/2 inches below the surface. Specialists at Michigan State college say that this is all wrong. By holding the new growth of asparagus just below the tips between the thumb and finger it can be broken off down to the tough part. Grower will get a premium for asparagus so harvested.

Patches that press on may be used for mending weak spots in the feet of hose. Mend before the weak spot wears through to make certain patch does not show.

When placing gelatin in a long flat dish, put a strip of waxed paper across the dish each way before pouring in the gelatine, and it will be easier to remove.

Stocking feet can be made more durable by rubbing candle wax or paraffin on heel and toe.

Small bottles with a combination screw cap and medicine dropper are convenient for storing small amounts of household oil near appliances that require regular oiling.

To remove a black coating from the outside of a frying pan, sprinkle borax on it and scrub with steel wool moistened with water. Wash in suds and rinse thoroughly.

MARLEY

By MRS. LOREN SASS

The June meeting of the Marley Woman's club was held last Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Clayton Cleveland. The meeting was opened with the pledge to the flag led by Mrs. G. W. Bush. A poem, "America," was read by Mrs. Royal Corp. Reports were given by the committee chairmen. It was voted to give $5 to the Salvation Army. The following program was presented by Mrs. John Riley: What Does it Mean to be an American, and Facts About the Statue of Liberty, by Mrs. Edw. Sproat. History of our Liberty Bell, Mrs. Minnie Blodgett; and Take Another Look at the Sun Dial, Mrs. G. W. Bush. Roll call was responded to with Something I Would Like To Do this Summer. A guessing game was played and the prize was awarded to Mrs. Richard Gorham. Refreshments were served. The club will not meet in July and August.

The Marley Unit of the Home Bureau met last Wednesday afternoon with the New Lenox and Homer units at the Camp Ground hall in New Lenox. The New Lenox Unit was hostess. Each unit held a business session before the program began. The lesson was given by the home advisor, Miss Mildred McBride. The Marley unit was represented on the program by two numbers. Miss Betty Haas played a piano solo and Miss Cheryl Sass sang and tap danced.

THE eight fine COLD SPRING GRANITES in our exhibit afford a color range of remarkable distinction. Vibrant, deep, rich hues of browns and reds; delicate pinks and brilliant grays — all encased beneath glazed surfaces of impenetrable hardness; surfaces which never dull because these beautiful granites are impervious to moisture and stains.

Love of COLOR is natural. Color in everlasting granite is being used more every year for individual and family memorials. Stop in at your convenience and leisurely view the interesting new designs in our exhibit. We will try to be helpful, should you care to make a selection, but regardless — you are always welcome here.

Flight to Frolic. It's probably a sure guess that you're in a vacation mood! So c'mon along with a couple of pilots flying for fun to a famous resort.

Last Saturday my observer and I headed for Lake Wawasee, Indiana, 100 miles East of Chicago. Wawasee Airport is just a half mile from the resort. Making good a straight flight path, we figured on reaching our destination in one hour. However, before leaving the runway, Roy Cleveland, Flight Manager at Rubinkam Airport and Airway Weather warned that a thunderstorm was heading our way, but we'd have a good chance to beat it.

From the ground, the sky looked inviting, so we began our race. Hurriedly we tossed various sports equipment, airmaps and ourselves into a new two place T-Craft. "Sunshine" Peterson, the line boy, spun the prop, and quickly we stuck the nose of the plane up at all earthbound traffic.

Facing the Weather. In a few moments we were 1500 feet in the sky above the highway and all its speed limits, officers and tickets, screechy brakes and horns. Above Gary, the entire southern contour of Lake Michigan to the Chicago loop was visible. Below, the mazes of railroad tracks looked like a gigantic spider web connecting towns and cities. We were having no trouble identifying check points and knowing we were on the right magnetic heading. But to the South, we could see an ominous cloud bank building up and speeding fast. The same wind hurrying it, was "spanking the tail" of our plane, and increasing our speed. Flying was smooth and easy.

Stop Lights in Sky. Thirty miles from Wawasee, we noticed those cloud formations were changing for the worse. The landscape seemed much too calm. As an exclamation point to these warnings, lightning flashed! Not wanting to discover the force of the storm by flying into it, we mapped our way to the nearest airport which was Plymouth. In a few minutes we snuggled our plane to the runway and the protection of a friendly little port. The line boy tied our plane securely and we were invited into a cozy Flight office to wait out the storm. As we listened to thunder outside, we requested the Flight Manager for hints about flying into Wawasee Airport for the first time. We found he manages that airport too, and gave us all the details that can mean so much to safe flying. Within half an hour the storm disappeared and we continued our flight, wiggling our plane wings at Plymouth personnel in thanks for their hospitality. In just one hour flight time from Chicago, we spotted Wawasee Airport, a neat green square with one hangar and a home nestled next to a big beautiful lake. We came in low over some trees and settled down on a smooth, but short runway. I kicked rudder to turn and avoided coming close to a fence at the far end.

Different World. We got out of the plane into a station wagon for a half mile drive to the lake and all the wonders of vacationland, fishing, swimming, boating, golfing, horseback riding. We frolicked for the day in this change of scenery and the joy of being with folks who were taking a bit of time off from all the troubles of Earth. We ate luncheon in the spacious dining room overlooking the lake, to the music of waves and a string ensemble. This was a complete contrast to the hustle, bustle of Chicago.

Rocking Horse Power. Well fed and contented, we headed for home port. The skyway was bumpy with updrafts and downdrafts left in the wake of the storm. As we bounced along, we noticed clothing on washlines was being blown straight out. Our first indication of a strong surface wind. At Rubinkam we came in for an uneventful landing, that should have been more exciting according to Roy Cleveland who explained the wind had risen to 45 miles an hour.

Resorts Air-minded. Our travel time for 200 miles was a little over two hours, about half the time it would have taken by car. The total cost was only three dollars more and we were far richer in fun and knowledge of the countryside. As planes become increasingly faster and safer, weekends in vacationland will be more convenient. Resorts everywhere are looking to the skyways and putting out the welcome mat for the new airflock, building airports and flight strips right on their doorsteps.

That's all for now.

DON'T TAKE A CHANCE

DO YOU "OVER-DRIVE" YOUR HEADLIGHTS AT NIGHT?

*Accidents Don't Always Happen to Somebody Else!
Check Up on the Chances You Take Every Day!*

Today traffic accidents are multiplying alarmingly! With the average car over eight years old... with bad brakes and dangerously worn tires, accidents involving worn-out equipment have more than doubled! And with Victory, drivers began cutting loose. In the four months after gas rationing ended, auto deaths jumped 36%!

And our record was already disastrous! Between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day more people were killed or injured by all types of accidents in America than were killed or wounded in the war! Here, "safe at home," 355,000 were killed—1,250,000 permanently disabled.

Certainly, somebody should do something about it. But the only one who can do anything really effective... is you! For most of the accidents that happen... are caused by the little things we all do, unthinkingly, every day. The careless little chances we take driving our car or crossing the street. The little repairs we neglect to make.

It's up to you! You can cut down America's accident rate—simply by not letting an accident happen to you. Check up on your accident-breeding habits right now. How many times a day do you take the chances shown here? Watch yourself.

HE THOUGHT HE COULD STOP IN TIME, TOO!

He didn't think he was taking much of a chance driving that fast at night. His headlights let him see 150 feet ahead—but it took 200 feet to stop! So he and that man changing the tire never had a chance! Darkness means danger... the fatal accident rate per mile of travel at night is almost 3 times greater than the day rate. How about you... do you make enough allowance for darkness?

- ☐ I drive faster than I should in darkness.
- ☐ I can stop within my headlight vision.

Mr. John Markey of Carthage, Ill., spent Friday and Monday visiting his nephew and family, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Murphy and family. He left for home June 18.

"Miss Minnie Miller is coming to Mokena on Wednesday, June 26. Meet her in the Mokena school gym."

Mr. Edward J. Flynn, wife and baby from Alexandria, Va. are today moving into their new home here, purchased from Mr. Geo. Peterson on First St.

A large Capitol Van Lines truck from Washington, D. C. arrived here today with their household furniture. Mr. Flynn, who has been a Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy, is associated with business activities in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Yunker entertained the following at dinner in their home last Sunday: Mrs. Hugo Stammer and daughter Wilma of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Steen and sons, and Mrs. Mable Krapp of Mokena.

Miss Marjorie Marti is enjoying a two week's vacation from her duties at the American Steel and Wire Co. office in Chicago.

The Misses Marjorie and Corinne Marti entertained at a kitchen shower in their home last Saturday afternoon honoring their cousin Miss Ruth Lowe and her approaching marriage. The hostesses presented Miss Lowe with a corsage of tea roses upon her arrival at the home. Various games were played and prizes were presented to Miss Mildred Cooper and Miss Jean Shevlin with duplicate prizes going to the honored guest. The many beautiful gifts had been placed beneath a white umbrella. This umbrella is an heirloom, 100 years old which was brought to this country by the great grandfather of the bride to be when he came from Switzerland. The dining table was beautifully decorated with streamers in yellow and blue, the bride's chosen colors. Two tapering candelabra were at either end. A delicious buffet luncheon was served.

The attractive and comfortable new Ranch House type of home, now nearing completion in Mokena built by Mr. Milton Geuther, is an achievement in facing the current challenge that "you just can not build now". "No one can get materials" etc. It's substantial wood exterior, stained and oiled in natural finish is balanced by a well finished type of Wall board, as interior base for either paint or paper decoration, while basic concrete floors are overlaid with attractive linoleum tiles.

Mr. Geuther is to be congratulated for his achievement in facing present difficulties.

The Woman's Guild of St. John Evangelical church met last Thursday afternoon. The following were hostesses: Mesdames Amanda Schult, Andrew Cappel, Julia Martie, Violette Whitlark, Rose Barenz, Ruth White, Fern Bass and Julia Beagley.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 9, was:

"GOD THE ONLY CAUSE AND CREATOR"

The Golden Text was:

"The Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting king: . . . He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion" (Jer. 10: 10, 12).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth . . . And God saw everything that he had made, and behold, it was very good. . . Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created" (Gen. 1: 1, 31; Rev. 4: 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Genesis and the Apocalypse seem more obscure than other portions of the Scriptures, because they cannot possibly be interpreted from a material standpoint. Because Mind makes all, there is nothing left to be made by a lower power . . . All that is made is the work of God, and all is good . . . God. The great I AM; the all-knowing, all-seeing, all-acting, all-wise, all-loving, and eternal; Principle; Mind; Soul; Spirit; Life; Truth; Love; all substance; intelligence" (pp. 546, 520, 521, 587).

"WAKE UP, AMERICA!"

Should Congress Restrict the Right to Strike?

As debated by

Hon. Alexander Wiley
U. S. Senator from Wisconsin;
Member, Senate Committee on the Judiciary

Herbert S. Thatcher
Associate Counsel, American Federation of Labor

SEN. WILEY OPENS: Certainly, yes. Congress must protect the public welfare. The public always gets it in the neck when ruinous strikes occur. The public—labor, management, farmer—all of us—are hungry for goods, for production. Shall we instead allow strikes to grow to the point where a general strike occurs and the nation is economically paralyzed? That must not happen. In this complex, atomic age, full and uninterrupted production all along the line must be maintained. Therefore, in order to protect the public interest, Congress should: (1) ban strikes in nationwide industries and public utilities such as transportation, communications, etc.; in these instances provide for compulsory arbitration as a last resort and as a substitute for strikes; (2) prohibit jurisdictional strikes between unions; (3) make unions striking in violation of contracts liable for damages just as corporations are liable; (4) change the law so the "right" to strike does not mean the right to intimidate and coerce others to stop work; (5) provide for cooling-off periods so as to calm tempers and enable reason and judgment to enter into the picture. I submit these five suggestions in order to help save our blessed land from more ruinous strikes. These five suggestions are for the benefit of all of us and are not designed to be either for or against any one segment of our population, but rather to be simply pro-American.

MR. THATCHER CHALLENGES: The present wave of strikes would be largely avoidable if industry had agreed even to voluntary arbitration. Until all possibilities of voluntary arbitration or fact-finding by public boards are exhausted, there is certainly no call for compulsory arbitration which, as before explained, means government control of profits and prices, wages and working conditions. Since their representative bargaining purposes is as vitally important to workers as their representative in Congress, how can we outlaw jurisdictional strikes any more than other strikes? As to a cooling-off period, honestly conducted collective bargaining is a sufficient substitute, particularly since compulsory delay usually works for management and against labor.

SEN. WILEY REPLIES: Ours is a government of laws, not of men. When labor and management cannot get together and the public interest is violated, government must legally step in in order to prevent strikes and insure justice for the public. In Sweden (which has a very high standard of living) there are special tribunals attached to the courts. These tribunals get the facts in labor disputes, hand down decisions which are respected by labor and management and thus prevent strikes. Why cannot we here replace destructive wildcat strikes, jurisdictional strikes, etc. with peaceful machinery that is fair and equitable for all?

SEN. WILEY CHALLENGES: As one who believes in true collective bargaining and the rights of labor, I ask these questions: (a) Does it "economically better" the worker if a racketeering labor boss orders a needless strike and thus deprives the workman of his daily bread? (b) Does the right to strike mean the right to cripple our production and prosperity? (c) 2,000 years after the birth of the Prince of Peace must we still settle labor-management differences by this destructive method of strikes which help nobody and injure everybody? The answer obviously is: The courts must be used constructively to prevent strikes and curb racketeers be they in labor or management.

MR. THATCHER REPLIES: A solution can hardly be found by invective or by a specious linking of strikes with racketeers. Production and prosperity are dependent upon free, not slave, labor, upon government by consent, not government by injunction. Strikes are welcomed more by labor than by management, but in the absence of true collective bargaining, there is no alternative consistent with the freedoms upon which this country was founded and prospered. Let management and labor sit down across the conference table as free agents and explore all the facets of each problem with a regard for the interest of each, and strikes will disappear.

VANDENBURG GOP CANDIDATE

WASHINGTON. — Erudite Senator Vandenberg of Michigan not only has been doing a good job on foreign relations, but he takes it—and himself—seriously. Perhaps one is necessary to the other. Talking to a friend the other day, the Michigan senator opined:

"Well, we're getting along pretty well now that we have a Republican foreign policy."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, analyze it for yourself," shot back the man who may be the next GOP nominee. "It all goes back to my now somewhat famous speech of January, 1945."

NOTE—Van claims he is getting bored with politics. "One question I can't answer to my wife's satisfaction," he says, "is why I'm running for re-election (as senator). I've threatened to divorce her if she asks me again." (The answer, of course, is that if Van doesn't run again for senator, he won't be in the trial heats for President.)

SENATE LABOR REBELLION

Deadliest backstage punches against President Truman's labor-draft program were scored by CIO Pres. Phil Murray in a secret meeting held by the senate education and labor committee.

Those present included Murray; Lew Hines, AFL legislative representative; Martin Miller, representing Al Whitney's railway trainmen; plus Senators Jim Murray of Montana (chairman), David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Elbert Thomas of Utah, Claude Pepper of Florida, Lister Hill of Alabama, Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania and Wayne Morse of Oregon.

The CIO president got right down to cases.

"My organization has always followed President Truman's recommendations in labor disputes and the record proves it," Murray declared. "Look at the auto, steel and oil disputes. We went along with the fact-finding boards. In some cases we had to accept much below what we asked, but we did so patriotically."

"Can industry say as much?" Murray continued. "Look what happened during the auto strike. General Motors held out for months against the recommendations of Truman's fact-finding board, which labor was willing to accept. That was a case of management striking against the government, but did President Truman call for a joint session of congress to upbraid General Motors officials as he did recently against labor? He did not."

NO-STRIKE PLEDGE?

Then, with a scowl, the usually mild-mannered CIO boss acidly added:

"Did he offer legislation then to penalize and enslave all management as he did in this case against labor? Well, I don't remember reading anything about it."

Senator Hill inquired if labor would be willing to offer Truman a compromise on the strike issue, such as a six month no-strike pledge.

"That is impossible, as far as the CIO is concerned," replied Murray emphatically. "My organization is run on Democratic lines and such a pledge could never be enforced. When members of a CIO union are working under intolerable conditions, I couldn't dictate to them not to strike. Therefore, I would never agree to such a pledge."

RATIONING FERTILIZER

Agriculture department experts are worried over a new drive by Dixie democrats. They now want fertilizer rationed. Hitherto, potash fertilizer has been used mainly for food growing, but now the southern bloc wants it rationed so more can go for the cotton and tobacco crops.

Midwest farmers do not object to the idea of rationing of potash, provided rationing regulations recognize the supreme importance of food. The Civilian Production administration, however, has always allocated scarce materials on the basis of a base period, and the southern representatives are insisting that any new rationing program be based upon 1944 consumption of fertilizer.

In 1944, five southern states used 44 per cent of the nation's fertilizer but produced only 10 per cent of the nation's food. In the same year, five midwest states produced 50 per cent of the nation's food but used only 6 per cent of the fertilizer.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The exit of young men continues. Josiah DuBois, one of Secretary Vinson's crack assistants, has resigned to practice law here and in Camden, N. J. . . . Secretary of the Interior Cap Krug ended a six-hour fishing trip in the Virgin Islands with a painful sunburn, then proceeded to sweat out 12 days of hotter negotiations with John L. Lewis. . . . At Fort Washington, Md., is a half-empty veterans' hospital which costs the taxpayers $211 a day per patient.

STRENGTHENING BONDS OF FELLOWSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:14-20; John 17:26, 28, 29.

MEMORY SELECTION—A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.—John 13:34.

Fellowship is a word which comes to its full meaning only in the relationship between the Lord and believers, which also brings them into just such a relationship with one another.

The Lord seeks his people and gives himself in friendship to them, even to the full devotion of death. Shall we do less for one another?

Our lesson presents four ways in which Christ fellowshiped with his disciples.

I. The Fellowship of the Passover (Luke 22:14-18).

It was late on Thursday, of what we call Holy Week, that Jesus and his disciples came to the upper room where Peter and John had already made preparation for the observance of the Passover (Luke 22:8).

This feast had (since that great and awful night of Israel's redemption out of Egypt's bondage) pointed forward to the Christ and to his cross as the fulfillment of the type of redemption by the shedding of blood.

Our Lord looked forward with intense desire to the Passover which he now observed with his disciples, for it was the last celebration of that feast recognized by God. All that it had foreshadowed of deliverance and hope was fulfilled in him who now sat at the table. He had moved forward with resolute purpose to this day when his mission on earth was to be accomplished, and he was to become the Christian's Passover lamb (I Cor. 5:7).

The Passover was a solemn feast of remembrance of God's deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, but it was now to be replaced by a new feast of remembrance of eternal significance. They went on into

II. The Fellowship of the Lord's Table (Luke 22:19, 20).

Taking the unleavened bread and the unfermented wine of the Passover which had just been observed, Jesus established the Christian feast of remembrance, which we call communion, or the Lord's table.

His words are significant, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (I Cor. 11:26). At the Lord's table his followers find spiritual strength in recalling his death for them, but they also find joy as they remember that he is to come again. They thus testify to the world that they believe and cherish these truths.

Our Lord also spoke of the cup as "my blood of the new testament." The word "testament" means covenant. The Lord's table, therefore, speaks of our allegiance to him, of our loyalty to our Lord, and of our devotion to his service. That is why the Christian church speaks of communion as a sacrament, a word from the Latin sacramentum, meaning oath, and essentially an oath of allegiance.

III. The Fellowship of God's Word (John 17:6-8).

John gives us a blessed account of the fellowship of Jesus and his disciples in the upper room, and then takes us into what is indeed "the Holy of Holies" of Scripture, our Lord's intercessory prayer. Here "the High Priest of our profession" (Heb. 3:1) brings us into the very presence of God.

At the very beginning of his petitions for them and for us (see v. 20) he speaks of the word which the Father had given him and which he had given to them.

This little company of men had been given to Christ, drawn out of the evil world and set apart for God's work. But note that the thing which distinguished them in the eyes of the Lord was that they had "kept" the word of God, even as they had received the living word, Christ, as the one whom the Father had sent.

That kind of fellowship with the Lord makes a man strong and useful. Life and testimony both ring true because they exalt Christ.

IV. The Fellowship of Prayer (John 17:20, 21).

Christ prayed for his disciples, not only those immediately present, but all who should through the ages since that day believe in Christ because of their witness.

That puts each one of us, who is a true disciple, right into the center of the greatest prayer fellowship of all time. He, the eternal and omnipotent one, prays for us. Why then should we be weak and faltering in our testimony or have failures in our life? Can it be that we have failed to count on his prayer and have tried to walk in our own strength?

The prayer for unity (v. 21) does not speak of an outward uniting of religious bodies such as is much favored and promoted in our day. Certainly where such unity can be attained without the sacrifice of principle or compromise with false doctrine it is desirable. Real unity is that of the heart.

G.I. SIDEWALK ASSOCIATION . . . When the chamber of commerce of Port Arthur, Texas, discovered a large body of unemployed veterans idle and seeking work, it moved to not only employ them but also beautify the city. The ex-G.I.s were formed into a concrete sidewalk laying association. In two weeks a pent-up demand for walks resulted in orders being signed for over 18,000 square feet. The veterans are making up to $12 a day at standard price of 35 cents per square foot.

THE GREAT CRONIN—PINT SIZED EDITION . . . Being the son of Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox (most highly paid big league skipper) carries some weight in the city of the bean and the cod. Corky Cronin, 5, kneels on one knee "just like pop," and lays down the modus operandi for a coming game to the "Lake Avenue Wildcats." His team doesn't seem to be taking young Cronin too seriously.

SPEED WINNER . . . A big victory smile shines through grease, grime and sweat as George Robson, Maywood, Calif., is congratulated as winner of 30th annual 500-mile speedway classic at Indianapolis, by his wife, mechanics and friends. Robson was a prewar contender but hard luck usually worked against him. His winning of the first postwar classic places him as the outstanding racing driver of the age.

Thomas Granville Burch, 77, Democratic representative of Virginia, who has been appointed to complete the term of the late Carter Glass in the United States senate. Left to right: Sen. Kenneth McKellar, Tenn., president pro tempore of the senate, who administered the oath; Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Virginia, and Senator Burch as he assumed his new duties. He says he will not run for re-election.

PRODIGY OF SCIENCE . . . Dr. Linus Pauling, California Institute of Technology, who has been awarded the Willard Gibbs medal by Chicago section of American Chemical society. At age of 30, in 1931, he was hailed as a "prodigy of American science." Native of Portland, Ore., he is one of world's leading theoretical chemists. He is a graduate of Oregon State college.

GOT HIS BREAD . . . A determined sort of a lad, Charles Robinson, 7, Somerville, Mass., trekked through Somerville, Medford, Everett and Chelsea to find bread for his mother. He ended with police protection.

He Just Had to Lean Against Something!

A convivial suburbanite who had missed his last train home noticed outside the station a neighbor, also in a rather hazy condition, leaning against a car. So he approached him and said: "Would you mind taking me home?"

"Not at all. Let's get in!" The other tactfully offered to drive. And in half an hour they were in their street.

"Now," said the driver, "where's your garage?"

"Don't have a garage."

"Where do you keep your car?"

"Don't have a car."

"But you were leaning against this car."

Kidneys Must Work Well

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

W.N.U. FEATURES

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane sets out to track down a gang of train robbers in the desert of San Loreto county. He meets Dolores Alvaro and Monte Garcia. Garcia tells him how Star La Rue once tricked Dolores' father out of his ranch and later shot him. Jim resigns as deputy, and confronts La Rue with the story. La Rue agrees to give Jim the Alvaro ranch in return for a promise of silence. Then Jim hires a new crew and tells them that he will be traveling about the extensive ranch for the next few days. He starts off alone with supplies for ten days on his pack horse. He leaves certain papers and instructions with Garcia and a message for Dolores, telling her, "I won't fail."

CHAPTER VI

He would be in and out of the ranch-house for a few days, he said; they were to keep their eyes open and their mouths shut. Did they savvy? They did.

At dawn next morning, they corralled every available head of saddle stock on the ranch. Doane picked two of them, one for a mount and one to pack grub and water. He rode off into the desert, leaving them in the corral. He had rations and water for ten days; an extra water container on the pack-animal held twenty gallons more of water, for an emergency. At noon he changed mounts, and rode the pack-horse. This was the rule. Sometimes four changes of saddle each day. It was mile-eating progress.

The morning of the seventh day he hit a hard-riden trail. At least a dozen animals had made the track. Following, he swiftly learned more. Two bands of horsemen had traveled this way, one close on the trail of the other, neither set of tracks over two or three hours old. "Here we are," muttered Doane. "There's company ridin' ahead. Let's go, old nag."

Shortly after noon, on a trail that looked like a cross-country stam-pede, he caught up with a band of six riders, headed by Sheriff Sam Flick of San Loreto. Flick had come south following the mountains. Doane and the sheriff met without the formality of a handshake, unconcealed enmity on Flick's face.

Sheriff Flick's Posse Hunts Bank Robbers

"So you decided to do a little work on this job after all, eh, Flick?" was Doane's greeting.

His former chief glared. "I have!" he exploded. "And no thanks to you, either. No help requested, what's more."

"I wasn't offering any, Flick. But say . . . are you sure you're on the right track?"

Flick exploded all over again, puffing, red-faced.

"She's done it now. That girl had the nerve to ride right into San Loreto, two nights ago. Two of her men held up a cow-buyer on the street and took close to eleven hundred dollars off him. An' the other two raided Hank Hawley's cash register, an' went on to the hotel. Got a hundred and eighty-six dollars. They broke into the bank, but the lock on the vault stumped 'em. No end of hell to pay!"

"Whew!" ejaculated Doane. "I reckon there might be, after that. Er . . . you followed the girl's tracks out of town?"

Flick glared at him. "No," he sputtered, "I didn't. But I had the good fortune to pick up some men that know how to ride an' how to trail. They know the country down here, too . . . an' a lot more to boot!"

Doane had already looked over Flick's men. They were the four cowhands he had discharged from Rancho de los Tres Hermanos the morning of his arrival, headed by the lank breed, Tony Suarez! Each was well mounted, and presumably deputized, to ride at Flick's side.

Doane made a halt while the posse went on. As his mounts rested, he climbed a ridge and kept watch over the country with his binoculars.

"Unless I'm mighty wrong," he mused, "they're hitting for that north water-seep. And I know a short cut that will beat 'em there."

Twelve hours later, at midnight, he rode cautiously into the north seepage. There were smoking embers of a fire there, and a few moist tracks. That was all.

"Hm-m-m. They're headed either for Tres Hermanos or Sand Wells," he concluded. "Reckon Flick made a dry camp behind them, waiting for dawn to show track."

Again Doane was right . . . in part. Pressed from the unexpected angle of the Sierra Nuevas, the pursued had hit directly for the Tres Hermanos country. But Flick had not halted overnight.

Dawn disclosed the new shifting of the pawns on that vast, arid landscape of the desert. The pursued crossed the Tres Hermanos boundary, plainly on familiar territory; five miles in their rear followed Doane. At sunup he sighted the tiny dust head that meant sheriff Sam Flick, to the rear.

The situation was decidedly serious. But just this also offered an unusual opportunity. Or unusual luck.

Doane now rode straight for the ranch. He threw aside his packs and saddle, turned the tired, gaunted animals free and had his men rope and put his gear on fresh ones. To the saddle again, in less than twenty minutes, moving across Tres Hermanos once more to intercept the trail. By this time, two independently moving, galloping forces were on the heels of the fugitives. Flick had shown unexpected generalship and split his forces at a strategic point, with Tony Suarez commanding one wing with two men. The ride went east.

It became a game of hare and hounds. The hares were five in number, on worn mounts that already had seen over twenty-four hours of continuous labor. Before middle afternoon, forced to zig-zag innumerable times, the quarry was turned back toward the desert by Flick's party, and the second posse, under Suarez, was racing obliquely toward them, to cut them off. Capture seemed inevitable, with this maneuver. Doane, watching the play through his binoculars, saw that Tony Suarez, riding hard, was gaining ground fast. That worried him.

"My God! What have I done?"

Flick and Suarez were shooting spasmodically, although the range was long. One of the mounts stumbled, but kept going. The pace slowed. Doane bit his nervous lips. Then, suddenly forced to it, the fugitives made a right-angle turn around the point of a hill, riding now at the very face of the chaparral ridge where Doane watched. His nervousness vanished.

"Good work, old girl! I know you now. And I want you, senorita Dolores Alvaro. I'll get you, and then we'll outride Sam Flick and leave him holding the bag."

The fugitives were riding swiftly into the chaparral when he lifted his binoculars again, gaining distance over Flick in the brush despite the hurt animal.

They popped up again in an utterly unexpected position; it was a crafty move. Riders swerved directly back into Flick's course, where the sheriff could not help but pick up the trail, turned sharply aside, and were gone. Flick hit the hot scent and tore after them. He did not see what Doane had seen with his glasses: that now they numbered four, instead of five. They had turned aside into the chaparral, left the wounded animal and its rider hidden there, and lured Flick off in a new direction.

Doane leaped into his saddle, put spurs to his horse and went clattering down the ridge. He could tell within five hundred yards of where the wounded mount and the rider had taken cover. The last he saw of the posse, as he turned at the edge of the brush, was a lifting cloud of dust over the ridges to the west.

"Now, Miss Alvaro!" He sank his spurs into the horse's flanks, and they went down the slope like a pair of cats. He struck the spot where the four had turned Flick aside. He turned the other way, back-tracing carefully. The trail wove through thick walls of brush, a perfect screen. At the end was a small clearing. Doane broke into the clearing.

A small lithe figure, in man's clothing, stood in the open space working on the injured horse. The figure whirled. Expressive eyes widened. Doane saw again the lovely, delicate mould of Dolores Alvaro's features. Anger and surprise held her motionless, staring at Doane, for a matter of seconds. Doane swept off his hat.

"Did Monte Garcia deliver my message to you, Miss Alvaro?" he asked pleasantly.

She whirled away. With all the supple strength of a man, she vaulted into the hurt mount's saddle. The animal responded gallantly, for the length of four or five paces toward the other end of the clearing. Then he stumbled.

Stumbled, sickeningly. Stiff in a foreleg, trying desperately to recover. Then he fell, head-on, in a kicked-up swirl of dust. Up-ended! The girl went free of the saddle, thrown half-a-dozen paces beyond.

It all happened before Doane's horse could make two leaps after her. She lay in a still, small, pitiful little heap on the ground, one arm doubled limply under her, the other flung straight beyond her head. Her mount scrambled stiffly to its feet again.

Doane blinked, trying not to believe what his eyes saw. He slipped from the saddle and bent over her. "Dolores! Dolores!"

She lay limp and passive in his arms. He could feel the light, slender weight of her body. He moaned. He cursed himself and his stupidity, madly.

"My God! What have I done?"

He laid her gently on the ground again and ran to the roan, for his canteen. Returning, he paused, listening once more to the irregular sound of her breathing. He bathed her face gently, washing the bleeding wound on her forehead.

"What a fool!" he groaned to himself. "What a fool I've been. She . . . she might have been killed."

He stared hard into the still face for a long time. He bathed her face again, as he held her close. Suddenly he noticed that her breathing was stronger, more regular. The color was returning slowly to her cheeks.

"Dolores!"

And then, as though commanded by that indomitable will so much stronger than his own which had carried him through that day and night in the desert, his head bent slowly and he touched her lips. Touched them reverently, and long. Twice he kissed them, three times, four, in a frenzy of relief. For a split instant, he felt her free arm go up and around his shoulder, and he thought he felt just the slightest pressure of her hand upon his neck. In a wild burst of joy, he lifted his head and looked squarely down into those midnight eyes, while his arm tightened about her. To his utter amazement and confusion, he found himself looking into two pits of fire. Her face was flushed with anger, and her eyes were blazing, and she was pushing him away.

"Let me go. Let me go, I say!"

Awkwardly, he helped her to her feet. She stood swaying, making him think of a reed swaying gently in the wind, her eyes locked upon his, her hand brushing at her lips, trying to rub away the kisses he had left there.

"You are indeed a fool, senior. You stop at nothing, like the men I warn you of. It was not enough that I save your life that morning in the desert. And the story Monte told you, that meant nothing! Or perhaps you used that story to help yourself, eh? To buy de los Tres Hermanos next to nothing, for yourself. And now, just for more insult, you trick me again. You dare to kiss me!"

"But . . . but Dolores; I . . . I love you. From the first moment I saw you, I have loved you. Please, listen . . ."

She clenched her fists at her sides, and stamped a most impressive foot on the ground.

"Don't you touch me! Don't you touch me, nor put your hands on me again, or I'll . . . I'll kill you." She dropped a trembling white hand to the gun that swung at her hip.

Dolores Pulls An Old Trick

Doane's lips turned white. He stood there like a foolish schoolboy; he picked up his Stetson from the ground and stood twisting it in vain in his great gnarled hands. Desperate, in a sudden panic, he turned his back on her, walked away and stood fussing with his kerchief and his hat and swearing at himself for his helplessness. He came to his senses as he heard the sharp slap of leather against horseflesh, and whirled around just as the girl settled firmly into the saddle, and struck the horse a blow with her quirt. She had his roan!

She tore across the clearing and into the brush of the chaparral. A hundred yards away, atop a little mound, she reined up the roan, almost pulling his forefeet into the air. She stood there, silhouetted against the sky, looking down at him. Her face broke, he thought, into a tantalizing smile; she lifted her sombrero and waved it at him.

"Adios, senior. This is the trick you teach me, pretending sleep, you remember? Next time, you will use the handcuffs, yes?" She swung the horse, dug in her spurs, and was gone.

Doane's heart leaped, and sank. He wanted to believe that she was not so mad, after all, that this had been an act. But her words had burned their way into his heart. He couldn't forget them. Sulkily, he stood stroking the mane of the injured mount she had left him.

"Well, come on, stranger. It's a long way to Tres Hermanos."

It was midnight when he arrived at the ranch, leading the horse. His cowhands were waiting, anxiously, for Flick and his posse were camped near the corrals. Doane gave no account of himself, except that he had lost his mount by accident.

"Sure mighty obliged to you," yawned the sleepy sheriff, gratefully. "But I don't savvy you, Doane. Never did, I guess. None the less, I'm thankin' you for the help you give me today. We'll run that outfit into the ground tomorrow."

Unemployment Benefits

The veterans administration in clarifying rights of veterans under the unemployment or readjustment allowances feature of the G.I. bill has announced that veterans who take temporary jobs retain their rights to unemployment allowances after they are released and they are not required to claim unemployment payments immediately after their discharge in order to protect their rights to benefits.

The G.I. bill provides that readjustment allowances will be payable to eligible veterans for two years after date of discharge, or two years after end of the war, whichever is later, and, since the war is not yet officially over, veterans already discharged still will have two years after official termination in which to file claims for unemployment benefits.

In no case may unemployment benefits be paid later than five years after the war. This would allow the veteran who re-enlists for three years during the war period an additional two years in which to receive payments. The veteran may apply for allowances as often as he becomes unemployed providing he does not voluntarily leave his employment without good reason, or he is not discharged for cause, and still has benefits available out of his maximum of 52 weeks.

Questions and Answers

Q. My step-mother has a son who has been in the army since World War I and she hasn't heard from him in six years. Could you tell me how to get in contact with him?—Mrs. J. E. R., Guntersville, Ala.

A. Write to the bureau of enlisted personnel, office of the adjutant general, war department, Washington 25, D. C., giving his full name, serial number if you have it, and all details.

Q. My husband was inducted into the army April 8, 1946. What would be the earliest date he could be released? He is 24 years old and in partnership with his father on a 12,800 acre ranch with 300 head of cattle. His father is in poor health and has no other help. Could he get a discharge on these grounds?—E. C., Miles City, Mont.

A. It would be impossible to tell you when your husband will be released since the army has not made regulations beyond June 30, 1946. If he can make a hardship or dependency case because of his need at home, he is entitled to apply to his commanding officer for release on these grounds.

Q. My husband is a private in Japan. He went into service February 28, 1945. Went across in November. We have a crippled baby which has to be taken to the hospital every two weeks in Atlanta. I put in for a discharge for him but they turned it down. Now I am hoping he will get a discharge by being a father. Can you tell me when all fathers will be home?—Mrs. E. M., Cartersville, Ga.

A. Under ordinary circumstances, your husband probably would have another year of service before he is eligible for discharge. At present, there is no distinction between fathers and non-fathers in the armed services, except where they have three or more children.

Q. I see where widows of war veterans of World War I are entitled to a pension. My husband recently passed away and would you kindly tell me where I should make application for the pension?—Mrs. A. E., DeGrasse, N. Y.

A. You should apply to your nearest veterans administration office, probably at Sunmount hospital near Tupper lake, or at the post office building in Watertown.

Q. My boy was drafted into the army in November and was married a few days before he left. He made his wife a $50 allotment. Can he make his mother an allotment too? He helped me before he went into the army and all of the children at home are still of school age. I am in bad health and so is my husband and I need his help badly.—Mrs. A., Arab, Ala.

A. Yes, he can make his mother an allotment, but it is voluntary on his part.

Q. I have a son who has been in Germany a year and two months. He is in the 4th army of occupation, TRPB, 51, constabulary squadron. He is almost 20 years old and has served most of his time overseas. He went into service Oct. 11, 1944. Will he be sent home soon?—M. B., Macks, Ark.

A. From your letter I cannot determine how many points he has earned, but he has served approximately 18 months. Men who have served 24 months by June 30 may be eligible for discharge by that date.

Spool Shelves for Interesting Trinkets

THESE graceful corner shelves are 10 inches wide and 7 inches deep at the bottom. Just the right size to hold the quaint match holder, the old-fashioned china doll head and other interesting trinkets that you have been treasuring. In Victorian times such shelves were strung together with cord and the spools saved from the voluminous amount of sewing done each season. Today, with spools piling up from our sewing, we make similar shelves that have all the old charm but are much more rigid and substantial.

The spools and shelves now may be practically welded together with new easy-to-use types of glue. The wire or cord is then run through, as shown here, so that the shelves may be hung in a corner ready to hold articles of considerable weight.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has designed an actual-size pattern for these three gracefully curved corner shelves which are graduated in size. This pattern also contains complete directions for cutting and joining these shelves as well as a pattern for another larger set of spool shelves.
